

Jones at the helm

The Windsor Star

July 5, 2011

Members of the Windsor Essex Regional Chamber of Commerce made a wise decision when they elected Jennifer Jones to serve a second term as their chair. Under her leadership, the chamber has gained a higher profile and taken positions on issues that matter most to people living in this community.

The entrepreneurial Jones, president and CEO of Media Street Productions, came out in support of the province's Green Energy Act, yet had no problem expressing concerns about the toll smart meters and rising electrical costs would take on local business owners.

The chamber also polled members on everything from the HST to regional transit and hosted the televised federal election debate in April.

While the chamber has always had a community presence, it seems to have reached a new level during Jones' tenure. With a redesigned website and more interactive approach, it has a strong voice in its chair, who is energetic, engaging and a passionate supporter of this region.

We look forward to the next year.

© Copyright (c) The Windsor Star